England To Film Labor Day Festival

David Filkin, Production Director for the British Broadcasting Co. will bring the BBC film crew from London to film the Blue Ridge Mountain Old Time Fiddlin, Banjo Pickin and Bluegrass Festival at James River Recreation Area, Natural Bridge, Virginia on Sept. 1st, 2nd and 3rd.

The three-day event is sponsored by the Virginia State String Music Association, a non-profit organization for the presentation and presentation of our early American music heritage. Howard D. Wolfe, President of S.M.A. said the world championship bands and musicians will perform each evening with afternoon workshops, competition and rehearsals.

Wolfe said, the Scotch, Irish, English and Europeans are beginning to turn on for Bluegrass which is very similar to the old time music brought to the Appalachian Mountains by the early Scotch, Irish, English and European settlers. it rolls down out of the Blue Ridge like a pure fresh mountain stream and is divided into two tributaries - 'Old Time' and 'Bluegrass'.

The old time music is the basic music of America and played almost exclusively with stringed instruments. The fiddle, banjo, guitar, madolin and string base and sometimes the autoharp or dulcimer are its instrumental expoments. Bluegrass has a highpitched, often strident, vocal style in two, three or four part harmony and is played at a much faster tempo.

Wolfe said the 500 acre park with swimming, boating and camping on the James River could easily accomodate the several thousand music lovers expected to attend.

The movie is scheduled to be shown in Eastern Europe and Great Britain in November.

Daniel Reports

By W. C. (Dan) Daniel
Virginia Fifth District Congressman

WASHINGTON - This week, I would like to explore a subject you have probably already heard more about than most people can comfortably accommodate. The subject is the effect of Watergate.

Lest I mislead you, let me say at the outset I cannot report to what extent there is guilt, or even set forth the degree of criminal activity. This is something which will be years in settling, and only after all the facts are in - and I mean all facts, developed in a court of law, where the rules of evidence protect the innocent.

What really concerns me just now, and it is a concern shared by many in and out of government, is the effect the whole matter is having on our national life.

In many areas, we are in a state of near-paralysis as charge and counter-charge are made. Rumor, hearsay, and accusations, make interesting reading and conversation. While they add nothing to our store of knowledge, they drive from our thoughts and our deliberations many far more pressing matters.

And this is one of the major tragedies of Watergate.

I do not subscribe to the statement that this matter has stymied legislative activity. The House has acted on many major pieces of legislation. While action has not necessarily been what many - myself among them - desire, legislative business does proceed. It has met more often and for longer periods than in prior sessions, and while much remains to be done, it has worked its will in a number of major categories.

Although Watergate has not halted the legislative process, it has in many respects distorted the result. Votes have been cast by some Members out of protest or spitefulness, with, in some instances, an apparent disregard of the consequences. Existing programs which are in dire need of examination and revision have been sidetracked or bottled up. Rather than attempt to work for change which will improve the lives of Americans, some Members have frittered away time, and a considerable amount of the taxpayers' money, on demagogic floor statements calculated to grab a headline.

Important decisions in the executive departments at the highest levels of government are being delayed. I would not attempt to assign percentage values to the causes of these delays, but certainly the fact that some 100 top executive posts are either vacant or occupied by an "Acting Director" has contributed to the delay, as has the time spent in avoiding any action which could be misinterpreted or distorted. It is belaboring the obvious to say that the man who never makes a mistake never does anything; on the other hand, when unattributed rumors and piecemeal data surface regularly, and careers can be destroyed by unknown accusers, the urge may well be strong to do nothing, lest the action be misinterpreted.

The second tragedy is the impact on the people of this nation, and this may have a deeper and more far-reaching effect than the first. All governments are based on one of two factors - faith or fear. Either the people of a nation willingly join in the selection of those who make and administer the laws, or they are kept in line by oppressive means.

Aside from the fact that it is a personal affront, I find it incredible that so many say it is so much regularly that all politicians are guilty of dirty tricks, that all campaigns are dishonest, that all government officials are unscrupulous, or lazy - or both. This simply is not true. And it is as much a slur on the electorate as on the elected. The implication that the American public is so gullible as to be regularly, year after year, led around like so many sheep is insulting to those who regularly meet their obligations as citizens on election day.

The question we must face is, what can we gain from the present condition in the United States? And the important word here is "we"?

I believe there are too many people in this nation who care about their country to let it fall victim to either dictatorship or anarchy. I believe that an inestimable good will be achieved if the American people, having taken a good look at the men - and they are men, not angels - who have the responsibilities of government, come to the realization that these men are much the same as you and I. This could well be the beginning of a return to reliance on ourselves, not "the government", to meet the needs prior generations met on their own. I believe it can result in more participation by people in the political process. It has been said that people tend to get the kind of government they deserve. It would be more appropriate to say that people can be sure to get the kind of government they need, if they will work for it.

Finally, I believe the one essential ingredient can be restored - confidence of the people in their government and their elected officials - if we are all willing to work toward that end. Today we reap the benefits of the generations which have gone before us. We can leave no finer legacy for those generations which will follow.

Cautious Driving Urged As School Openings Near

Richmond - A plea for defensive driving has been noted with the opening this month of many schools.

"Motorists, especially those driving through school zones or near bus stops, may need a reminder to watch for students going to and from school. Students naturally tend to congregate in these area, increasing the need for cautious driving," according to John T. Hanna, director, Highway Safety Division of Virginia.

"Be particularly careful when approaching intersections. They are a dangerous area because of the heavy volume of traffic and pedestrians which meet there," continued the safety official. "Don't forget, when approaching a stopped school bus, even from right angles, you must stop."

Hanna said a national survey revealed that 24 per cent of all fatal accidents occur at intersections. "To help reduce this figure, slow down and look, especially for children, before entering an intersection.

"Be prepared for a quick stop. An impatient child might try to cross the street quickly by darting in front of traffic."

"WHO SHALL LAY ANYTHING TO THE CHARGE OF GOD'S ELECT" Romans 8:33

Most blessed challenge! How unanswerable it is! Every sin of the elect was laid upon the great champion of our Salvation, and by the atonement cancelled away. There is no sin in God's book against his people; he seeth no sin in Jacob; neither iniquity in Israel; they are justified in Christ forever. When the guilt of sin was taken away the punishment of sin was removed. For the Christian there is no stroke from God's angry hand - no not so much as a frown of punitive justice. The believer may be chastised by his Father but God the judge has nothing to say to the Christian, except "I have absolved you; you are acquitted." For the Christian there is no penal death in this world, much less any second death. He is completely freed from all the punishment as well as the guilt of sin and the power of sin removed too. It may stand in our way and agitate us with perpetual warfare; but sin is conquered foe to every soul in union with Christ.

We welcome your letters of inquiry.

CARLTON HARRIS, PAMPLIN TOBACCO GROWER, looks over another top crop of Virginia 312. Harris has grown tobacco in this same area for 10 years and averaged over 2,000 pounds per acre, with the exception of last year because of flooding. Good fertilization is a prime reason for high yields. This crop received 128 pounds of nitrogen.
